FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.

General Meade's Report.

An imperfect abstract of the report of General Meade on the Ashburn murder case, the tendency of which will be to place an incorrect idea of the subject, has been given out from the White House to the Democratic press.

The General Meade received the authority he demanded, the entire official history of the affair will be published, together with the evidence taken before the Military Commission on the trial of the defendants. It will show that the evidence was not the guilt of the accused persons; that the murder was a cold-blooded and unprovoked attempt to put to death a Federal soldier, and that the sympathy of the people of Columbia with the criminals was such that obstacles in the way of justice were almost insuperable.

Mob Law in Louisiana.

The following dispatch has just been received here from one of the Louisiana members of Congress:

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 9.—To T. L. Talbot, Secretary National Convention, New York, N. Y. St. Francisville was mobbed by armed Democrats on the 20th of August. ## The September Session.

The pressure for a September session of Congress is increasing, and the members of the Unionists. There will be no decision upon the subject until the result of the Maine election has been ascertained. If the Republicans carry the State by an extra vote, the probability is that when President Johnson is relieved from the fears of Congressional interference he will adopt measures that will be to the advantage of the Union hands of the Democracy. Leading Republicans also apprehend that if the President is left unchecked by Congress he may find means to remove Commissioners Rogers and employ a substitute who will use the internal revenue patronage against the Republicans.

Treasury Department.

An export warehouse has just been established for Boston, to which shipments of tobacco in bond, under the new regulations, can now be made.

The Case of Binckley.

He was called upon to make a landing and found evidences of the success of the attempt to plant civilization in Africa. He believes the great want is capital, while many have been from the great number of emigrants have been agricultural laborers. Too many are from the northern cities, and of mixed blood and unable to stand the climate. The southern planters have not raised sufficient suitable food to support the immigrant population, and actually imports from the United States. The southern plantation laborers succeed well.

Commander Jeffries thinks that if any impression is to be made on Africa, it will be through this colony, which seems to be based on Christianity and moralizing principles, while all the other establishments are based on trade in rum, gunpowder and muskets. He states that he has seen the reports that the slave trade is entirely suspended.
